Lenka Kavčič is an architect, mentor, lecturer and an advocate of quality architecture. She strives to educate and raise awareness of the importance of quality built space in Slovenia and abroad. Her field of interest is sustainable, rational and sensible space design, which offers people a quality living and working environment. She specializes in innovative approach to space interventions and advocates a higher dwelling culture. She is a certified DGNB advisor in sustainable planning and encourages investors, clients and general public to take advantage of excellent sustainable architectural solutions.

Lenka Kavčič gained her experience working with several institutions. In previous years she served as vice dean at the Faculty of Design in Ljubljana. As a visiting lecturer at the Politecnico in Milan she mentored graduate students in interior design.

She founded the aFRONT Institute, the organizer of Open House Slovenia Festival (OHS), part of Open House Worldwide. For the past ten years, OHS has been the biggest architectural festival in Slovenia, featuring the most important online guide to contemporary Slovenian architecture, www.odprtehiseslovenije.org. OHS Festival is the recipient of the highest architectural award in the country – the Plečnik's Medal.

Lenka Kavčič was also awarded the same prize for the Playful Architecture project of introducing architecture to children, and the gold medal of BIO 16 – Biennial of industrial design.

Her mission is to achieve a higher level of space culture and architectural standards, as she firmly believes that space should be dedicated to people and that only through collaboration can we preserve and create a better space for our future.
